INTRODUCTION

The Fourteenth International Workshop on Human Subjects for Biomechanical Research was held in San Diego, California on October 26, 1986, the day preceding the 36th STAPP CAR CRASH CONFERENCE. Attendees numbered approximately 56. Ten papers were presented. The meetings staff of the Society of Automotive Engineers, (SAE), arranged for the meeting room and provided audio-visual support and refreshments. The Workshop Committee hereby conveys its thanks and appreciation.

Just prior to the meeting we received word of the death of David Foust after a long illness. Many of his friends and associates left to attend services in his memory in Los Angeles, California. We will greatly miss David's participation and dedication in support of our Workshop.

This year the discussion periods following each paper were professionally taped, and so it is possible to include, verbatim, those portions of the proceedings. In only two instances was it impossible to identify the questioners' names and/or affiliation. The discussions are included in the text immediately following the papers to which they were directed.

Lastly, we note that the papers presented at these workshops are not to be considered as formal publications and should not be included in the bibliography of other publications.

INTRODUCTION

The International Interactional Workshop on Human Support for Computer-Based Systems was held in San Diego, California, from October 1988 to November 1988. The workshop was organized by Richard B. Stammers, University of California, San Diego, and John M. Carroll, University of California, San Diego. The workshop was held at the University of California, San Diego, and was supported by the National Science Foundation, Grant Number IRI-8808088.
